Distress in the Stomach

There are many people who have a distress in the stomach after meals. It is due to indigestion and easily remedied by taking one of Chamberlain's Tablets after meals. Mrs. Henry Padghan, Victor, N. Y., writes: "For some time I was troubled with headache and distress in my stomach after eating, also with constipation. About six months ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. They regulated the action of my bowels and the headache and other annoyances ceased in a short time." Obtainable everywhere.

LOVE THAT LIVES

By WILLIAM L. VISSCHER.

After dinner, in Arthur Johnson's "smoke-house" the two cronies sat: Major Tom Hob Hart, bachelor, ex-soldier, and relic of romance; his companion, Arthur Johnson, little more than half the age of the major.

Toward the end of a specially good cigar the major had sat for some minutes, "lost to the world"—apparently. "Major, I'll bet a horse that you are thinking, this minute, of some prehistoric love affair. Ah! you sly old pirate!"

"Arthur, boy, you like me, don't you?" queried the major, in a voice full of pathos and touched with solitude.

"Who does not, major, that knows you?"

"Well, I'm glad of that. You are just the kind of a friend I like to have. You are fond of me without having any very good reason for it."

"In this way you remind me of a sweetheart I had once—got her yet, as to that. But her husband and I are friends."

"Often she and I call each other 'Honey,' which is a common expression of friendly affection in the South, where we both came from."

"Now it may seem funny to you, but that little woman doesn't know that I am 'honey.'"

"Is she blind?" the younger man promptly and bluntly asked.

"Of course she's blind. Blind as a bat, and yet her eyes are as good as anybody's. She is simply a living exemplification of the trite old saying that love is blind."

"I'll tell you just how it was, and I'll test your credulity right at the start. Make you smile, too."

"I was a handsome boy. 'Gee! but you do laugh, don't you? And yet I had tried to prepare you for it. Well, I was handsome. That sweet-heart of mine and I grew up to love each other, just naturally, and in fact we didn't know it until too late."

"When the war came I went. Before the storm of patriotism was over, a great, big man, who was not nearly so practically patriotic—or idiotic—as I was, came along there and told my sweetheart things that I had not thought to tell her. Moreover, he was accumulating gold while I was not gathering anything more substantial than glory, but I was fairly windrowing that. It has melted like the snow forts of boyhood."

"Those who had the direction of her ways directed her toward him and he gathered her in. He has her yet."

"After the storm went down, strange as it may seem, there was no calm for me—perhaps there was too much calm."

"At first I frequently saw my old sweetheart, then came long spells when I didn't see her at all. At last it dawned upon my opaque heart and brain that I was in love with that little woman, and always had been. Sometimes I thought I would try to steal her. But I thought better of it, and she—Heaven bless her!—wouldn't have thought of it at all."

"I did the next worst thing, however. I told her that I loved her, always had and always would. To my utter astonishment, dismay, and happiness, thereby perplexing me more than ever, she confessed—that she had loved me in the old days, and—but she loves her husband."

"The other day I was telling her that she was the only woman I had ever loved and that she was always a pearl. She said:

"You're a dear old fellow, but you must not talk that way."

"Oh! That's all right," I said. "I am old and homely enough to be a privileged character."

"She leaned over, her elbows on the marble between us, hands to her face, and looked searchingly and inquiringly into my eyes. Then as if deeply bewildered and amazed, she said:

"'N-o-o! Are you homely, Honey?' " "Yes, indeed, picturequely homely. Don't you see that I am old, and wrinkled, and bald, and stooping, and lame, and querulous, and fidgety, and—"

"'No,' she exclaimed, 'I only see my gallant boy sweetheart, and his patient, knightly, hidden soul. I remember the flash of your sword in the sunlight that morning when, as the boy-captain that you were, marching with your men to the war, you saluted the cheering village girls in passing. The gleam of that blade has always kept you and your eyes before me.'

"Say, my son, I have clung to a spar amid the crawling canyons of the ocean, until dashed breathless and unconscious upon a long stretch of white beach on an arid island of the seas; I have faced the fierce sirocco and foremost focal fire of battle, time and again, and felt its fiery breath blow back the brown locks that then were mine; inspired by a something whose achievement might be borne to her, I have poured out a stream of impassioned eloquence before an audience of heroes and statesmen, until they climbed to chairs and tables yelling: 'Old man, you're a king!' But never—even in the deepest intensity of any instant at such times as these have I had such satisfaction and triumph, or more of a yearning for more of life, than when my old sweetheart leaned over and said, with the light of love in her eyes and its music in her voice:

"'N-o-o! Are you homely, Honey?' " —San Francisco Argonaut.

SALIS IS FINE FOR KIDNEYS, QUIT MEAT

Flush the Kidneys at once when Back Hurts or Bladder bothers—Meat forms uric acid.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they can't filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, so you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

At the moment you feel a dull ache in the legs or your back hurts, or if the air is cloudy, effusive, full of acid, irregular, of passage or attended by a sensation of swelling, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable druggist and take a tablespoonful in glass of water before breakfast for a week and your kidneys will then act free. This famous salts is made from a blend of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithium and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and regulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in uric acid so no longer is a irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and causes no injury, makes a delightful effervescent lithium-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.
